

Quick Reference: Reporting Elder Abuse

Several state and federal laws require reporting related to suspected abuse, neglect, and exploitation of older adults. This reference guide is designed to provide a high-level overview of these laws. The guide has three parts:

- Table 1 includes summaries of the reporting requirements.
- Table 2 includes contact phone numbers for all 100 county social services agencies.
- Table 3 lists some of the crimes that are subject to the specific reporting requirement applicable to employees and volunteers in mental health, developmental disability, and substance abuse facilities.

For more information about each type of reporting obligation, refer to the Legal Framework for North Carolina's Elder Protection System.

Table 1. Summary of Mandatory Reporting Obligations

Almost everyone	County DSS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ■ Any person (with one limited exception described below) who has <ul style="list-style-type: none"> □ reasonable cause to believe □ that a disabled¹ adult is in need of services to protect the adult from abuse, neglect, or exploitation must file a report with the county department of social services (DSS).² ■ Reports must be made to the social services agency in the county where the adult either (1) resides or (2) is present. See Table 2, below, for contact information for each county’s agency. ■ The only exception to this reporting requirement applies to the regional staff working with the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman Program, which provides advocacy for long-term care facility residents. They may report abuse, neglect, or exploitation to DSS with the consent of either (1) the affected resident or (2) the State Ombudsman.
County DSS	District attorney	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ■ If, in the course of an adult protective services evaluation, DSS finds evidence that an adult has been abused, neglected, or exploited, DSS must notify the district attorney. ■ The notice must be in writing and must include the specific findings from the evaluation.³
